

Gabriel Feltham had a huge surprise over the Christmas break when he popped into Gullivers Bookshop in Wimborne.

To celebrate Gabriel's 13th birthday, his parents Boo and Tony had published the book their son had spent the last two years writing.

And to enhance the surprise, bookshop owners Malcolm and Anne Angel had allowed them to display his book 'Assassinate Academy and The Iron Rose' on a shelf - and when Gabriel went into the shop he spotted it.

Gabriel started the 35,000 word book when he was just ten years of age, and he finished it last summer at the age of 12.

An adventure fiction story it is aimed at 11-14 year olds.

The back cover blurb states:
This debut novel follows Lizzie and Lydia Barret arriving at their new school. They make friends and get a detention and everything seems normal until the police arrive sending the two of them and their new friends, Gabriel and Max, into an adventure that will change their lives for ever. Fights, heists, annoying clones, a talking pig, car chases, an irritating laptop, an ex-colonel who has only learned to yell and a secret unknown academy that trains them to be assassins... and much... much... more...

The front cover was designed by Gabriel's friend Erin Goodwin who is a fellow pupil at St Michael's Middle School.
